It’s a really good app, I met new people new friends and more. There’s only one problem so far and it’s that I can’t hear my friends or the people it’s of the time. But apart from the sound problems there’s no other issues. Monkey is a really fun app and I really suggest others to download it. Oh and if you see something you don’t like you can always flag it and complain and you probably won’t see it again. That’s also why they put a 17 or over sighn do mature people can go on it

Risks

- Students connect with strangers online, which can be very dangerous
- The Monkey app shares it's users personal information with third parties
- Since the Monkey app functions like Snapchat, kids love using it
- Random video chatting apps, like Monkey, make it easy for teens to be targeted by predators
- 15 seconds isn't a long enough to determine if someone is worth connecting with on social media
- Users are likely to encounter inappropriate content on the app and be asked to share mature content
- Content with bullying, bad language, and nudity is common on the Monkey app despite their content moderation
- There is no way to verify that the person you are about to chat with is actually the age and gender they've indicated in their profile
- Since Monkey is connected to your Snapchat account, it can be easy for strangers to get access to your personal information

What parents say about the Monkey App:

Too much nudity for minors, or anyone under 18!

"Happened to see my son and his friend using the monkey app, what I witnessed was appalling. Young teens and preteen boys flashing their privates, cursing, grotesque language, name calling, bullying, racist derogatory names, asking the person they're chatting with to show them their private parts."

My daughters were violated!!!

"Please do not allow your children to have this app on their electronic devices. It is completely inappropriate for kids any age."
